Marketing Strategies and Planning

INTRODUCTION

- This Marketing Strategies and Planning training course concentrates on the simple, yet undeniable fact that excellent Marketing has never been more important than it is today. In a world of a million "me-toos", countless product comparison websites and the ubiquity of Social Media, your customers are facing a curious paradox:
- They have never been so comprehensively informed, yet
- They have never been more confused
- Customers are beyond distracted, and attention-spans are at an all-time low. Companies are striving for relevance, and differentiation has never been more challenging to achieve. Addressing and correcting these key issues is the purpose of this training course.

This training course will highlight:

- How to build clear, compelling value and communicate it to the right audience, at the right time in the right medium
- How to analyse and segment the market and then craft compelling value propositions that get attention and bring in revenues
- How to gain a deep insight into consumer behaviour and learn how to market to it
- How to establish metrics for the measurement of marketing programme effectiveness
- How to oversee the company marketing function to identify new customers for products and services
- How to establish short and long-range marketing plans, objectives, and operating procedures
- How to explore new ways to identify and engage new customers using social media platforms

OBJECTIVES

- This has lofty but critically essential goals, and the companies are searching for ways to demonstrate their relevance to an increasingly distracted customer base.
